

ABSTRACT

In an electronic control system for cycles, for example competition bicycles, which comprises a display unit, a control unit and a power unit for governing actuators provided on the cycle, for instance a gear shift actuator, in absence of said display unit, the control unit and the power unit are able to ensure performance of a set of basic locomotion functions, such as an upwards and downwards gear shifting and an upwards and downwards derailleur shifting.